Our economic and political problems embrace a region whose extent is beyond the Arctic Circle in Alaska, southward to Samoa, and east and west from China and the Philippines to Liberia and Tangier. If our territorial holdings are not so widely distributed as those of Great Britain, our total economic power and commercial relations are no less extensive. It is in the light of these considerations that I have undertaken a complete revision of The New World to conform with the events of the period since 1921, when the first edition appeared. To make room for many additional maps and the discussion of the latest treaty developments, I have omitted the photographs that appeared in the first edition.
