Richards, Christy Edina. An Assessment of the Mary Shore Cameron Sherlock Holmes Collection at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. A Master's Paper for the M.S. in L.S. degree. November, 2003. 235 pages. Advisor: David Carr.

This paper assesses the Sherlock Holmes Collection of Mary Shore Cameron held in Wilson Library's Rare Book Collection at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. This assessment includes a brief summary of the strengths and weaknesses existing within the different portions of the collection. The paper also includes a detailed and comprehensive shelf list of all 3,000+ items, and a list of works that must be obtained to fill gaps within the collection.

I want to offer my heartfelt thanks to all the staff at Wilson Library's Rare Book Department, particularly Susan Bales, Libby Chenault and Jennifer Rinalducci. Even after I requested nearly every item in the Cameron Collection, they always had a smile and an encouraging word for me. Their efforts are very greatly appreciated.

Thanks also to Ronald De Waal, Richard Lancelyn Green, John Michael Gibson, and Don Hobbs for creating such valuable Sherlockian bibliographies. Without their wonderful resources, this paper would have been literally impossible.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge the woman who made it all possible: Mary Shore Cameron. May her Holmesian vision continue to inspire for years to come.

Introduction

“It is my habit, you see, to talk of that which interests myself and so I hope that I may interest you.”

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. “How the Brigadier Came to the Castle of Gloom.”

Since his first published appearance in 1887, Sherlock Holmes has been a source of delight to thousands of readers. Over 120 years later, Sherlock holds the distinction of being one of the most famous literary characters of all time. Amazingly, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle only wrote sixty stories featuring the famous detective. Even so, these few fictional works proved to be a goldmine of research potential. Holmesian scholarship appeared in print as early as 1908 (Arthur Bartlett Maurice’s article “The Forebears of Sherlock Holmes” was published in the Literary Digest in that year). Since that time, hundreds of thousands of individual works of scholarship have been published. With so many scholars focusing on Sherlock Holmes, it is critical that libraries support the research needs of these users.

The importance of maintaining a Sherlock Holmes collection cannot be overemphasized. Librarian, Tim Shaughnessy observes:

It is collections such as Sherlock Holmes that give research libraries their distinction, that differentiate one library from another, and enable them to fulfill their mission. And it is by means of such collections that the library is able to build relationships with new constituencies, including international interest communities, which might otherwise remain unknown to the library.
(Shaughnessy, 4)

Although libraries throughout the United States possess holdings related to Arthur Conan Doyle, surprisingly few actually have Sherlock Holmes collections. The exceptions can be found in Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, San Francisco, Tulsa, Minneapolis, and Cambridge¹. It is not surprising that most of these Sherlockian collections appear in large cities in the Northeastern and Midwestern United States. Unknown to most Holmesian scholars, though, there is one southeastern library with a collection of Sherlock Holmes material: The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Housed in Wilson Library's Rare Book Department, the Mary Shore Cameron Collection contains over 3,000 items of Sherlockian interest. Donated in 1978, the collection spans the broad and complex body of Holmesian material. Unfortunately, due to poor organization and practically non-existent publicity, it has fallen into near-obscure. Additionally, the collection has not yet been catalogued on the library's online system; this makes it difficult for users and librarians to search for specific holdings within the collection. Without some effort to assess its holdings, the collection will undoubtedly remain in obscurity—overlooked by potential scholars who are ignorant of its existence.

Problem Statement

“Before turning to those [...] mental aspects of the matter which present the greatest difficulties, let the inquirer begin by mastering more elementary problems.”

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. A Study in Scarlet Ch. 2

Mary Shore Cameron, a former librarian and mystery buff, was responsible for beginning the collection now housed at the University of North Carolina. From the mid-1940's until her death in 1968, she avidly developed her private Sherlockian collection. In 1978, her husband, Dr. Edward Cameron, donated the collection to the university. Because the University's library already held an impressive Mystery Fiction collection, the Sherlock Holmes collection dovetailed in with the existing holdings. Although popular at first, the collection began to fall into obscurity. So much so that even teachers and librarians at the University are ignorant of its existence. Not surprisingly, this ignorance extends to the greater Sherlockian community as well. Preliminary research indicates that this may be the only Academically-held Sherlock Holmes collection in the southeastern United States. Because of this, its importance cannot be overestimated.

The collection's obscurity cannot be attributed to any one reason, however, there are some major contributing factors—most notably, the cataloguing of the collection. As of the writing of this paper, only the most recently acquired items appeared on the online card catalog system. Altogether, this constitutes less than 1% of the collection's total holdings. Thus, it is impossible for librarians and researchers to remotely search the collection.

Moreover, the holdings of the collection are only listed in two places: the manual card catalog of the Collection (filed in main entry order) and the shelf list (filed in call number order). The manual card catalog attempts to list items by the person or agency responsible for writing the work. However, there are many items that do not fit into this category. For example, there are anonymous works which are filed by title, groups of works that are filed by their format (souvenirs and miscellanea, for example), and some works that do not have cards at all. Because of the organization of the card catalog, a user may be required to search by several different fields to find the particular item they want.

The shelf list is not generally available to patrons, however, it can be viewed if specifically requested. Like all shelf lists, it appears in call number order. Unfortunately, Cameron does not follow any established cataloguing system. Dr. Cameron and Miss Brooke Alan of Wilson Library's Southern Collection invented the cataloguing system soon after the collection's donation (Cameron 6). The system attempts to break up the collection into logical units. It does this by separating the items based on subject matter and format. Altogether the system is made up of twenty-eight categories. To better illustrate the cataloguing system, a brief description of the categories appear below:

1. Bibliographies – Bibliographies of Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes and detective fiction in general.

2A. First and Other Editions (English and American) – High spot editions of the “Canon” (the four novels and the fifty-six short stories that Arthur Conan Doyle wrote about Sherlock Holmes).

2B. Pastiches and Plays by Doyle – Sherlockian pastiches and plays written by Arthur Conan Doyle.

2C. Sherlock Holmes Novels Bound with Each Other or Other Stories – Sherlock Holmes stories that are bound with other works.

- 2D. Sets of Sherlock Holmes Stories – Complete sets of Sherlock Holmes stories—both single volume and multi-volume.
- 2E. Paperbacks of Sherlockian Stories – Paperback versions of the Sherlock Holmes stories.
- 2F. Foreign Language Editions – Sherlock Holmes stories published in foreign languages.
- 2G. Shorthand Editions – Sherlock Holmes stories published in shorthand.
- 2H. Combinations of the Stories: Selections, Juveniles, etc. – Abridged editions, juvenile editions, and selections of Sherlock Holmes stories.
3. Periodicals Containing the Sherlockian stories – Sherlock Holmes stories published in magazines and newspapers.
- 4A. Books and Pamphlets about the Writings and Associated Topics – Literary criticisms, chronologies, biographies, poems, songs, and collections of essays related to Sherlock Holmes.
- 4B. Books which Contain Material about the Writings – Books containing articles, reviews, or criticisms related to Sherlock Holmes.
- 4C. Periodicals containing Material about the Writings – Magazines and newspapers containing articles, reviews, or criticisms related to Sherlock Holmes.
- 5A. Imitations, Parodies, Pastiches, Plays, etc. in Book Form – Sherlockian parodies and pastiches written by authors other than Arthur Conan Doyle. Published in book form.
- 5B. Periodicals Containing Imitations, Parodies, Pastiches, Plays, etc. – Sherlockian parodies and pastiches written by authors other than Arthur Conan Doyle. Published in magazines or newspapers.
6. Associated Books and Pamphlets – Books and pamphlets about subjects that are addressed in Sherlock Holmes stories or related to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
7. Baker Street Irregulars and other Sherlock Holmes Societies – Publications of Sherlock Holmes Societies in the United States, England, and Denmark.
8. Pictorial and Map Materials – Postcards of Victorian England, Sherlockian maps, pictures torn from Victorian-era periodicals, and illustrations from Sherlock Holmes stories.
9. Letters and Other Autographed Items by Doyle and Other Authors – Autographed letters by Arthur Conan Doyle and notable Sherlockians.

10. Mary Shore Cameron Correspondence – Letters of Sherlockian interest written to Mary Shore Cameron.
11. Scrapbooks of Mary Shore Cameron – Four Sherlockian scrapbooks containing newspaper and magazine clippings, pictures, letters and cards, programs, advertisements, book lists, and miscellaneous items.
12. Non-Sherlockian Stories, Other Writings, and Complete Works of Doyle – Non-Sherlockian novels, short stories, poetry and non-fiction works by Arthur Conan Doyle. Includes works published in books, magazines, and newspapers.
13. Programs, Menus, and Other Ephemera Related to Sherlockian Events – Programs and menus from Sherlockian events and meetings. Also letters, postcards, and miscellanea pertaining to Sherlock Holmes.
14. Dealers' Catalogs, Bills, Addresses, Brochures and Some Correspondence – Catalogs, brochures, business cards, and correspondence from publishers and book dealers.
15. Sherlock Holmes Greeting Cards and Stationery – Sherlockian Christmas cards, Christmas cards designed by Mary Cameron, and Christmas cards sent by Sherlockians to Mary Cameron.
16. Sherlock Holmes in Theatre, Motion Pictures, Radio and Television – Sherlockian posters, pressbooks, brochures, souvenir booklets, stills from motion pictures, and scripts from movies and radio shows.
17. Miscellaneous Manuscripts – Unpublished Sherlockian articles, pastiches, and radio scripts by authors other than Arthur Conan Doyle.
18. Journals – Issues of the Sherlockian journals: the Baker Street Journal, the Sherlock Holmes Journal, the Baker Street Gasogene, and the Armchair Detective.

Within these twenty-eight categories, the works are typically arranged either alphabetically (by author), alphabetically (by title), or chronologically (by publication date). Once a user gains an understanding of the cataloguing system, the shelf list becomes particularly helpful for browsing. For example, if a patron is looking for all early editions of A Study in Scarlet they can look under the category “First and Other Editions of the Sherlock Holmes Stories” and browse the editions of that work.

Unfortunately, the shelf list also exposes the weaknesses in the cataloguing system. Many works in the collection logically fall into more than one category. Returning to the previous example, a user may have to search under “Paperback Editions of the Stories” to find other early editions of A Study in Scarlet.

The obscurity of the collection can also be linked to its lack of promotion. In the brochures and website of Wilson Library’s Rare Book Collection, the Sherlock Holmes collection is nothing more than a passing reference. It lacks even so much as a brief sentence of description. Although the Rare Book Library has held several lectures and exhibits on Sherlock Holmes, these events were not heavily advertised among the Sherlockian community. This has further attributed to the lack of recognition for the collection.

I intend to resolve this problem using a two-fold strategy. First of all, it is my intention to create several documents including a master shelf list, a desiderata list, and a collection assessment. The master shelf list, which is based on the shelf list already maintained by the library, will offer a greater level of detail than is currently available. Like the manual shelf list, it will appear in call number order. This arrangement is designed as a more browser-friendly approach. Presumably, anyone looking for specific holdings may contact or visit the collection and use the manual card catalog.

The desiderata list will attempt to list all the items that must be acquired to complete sets, and serial runs, as well as completing the holdings of a publisher, author or format. The purpose of this list is to give the user and the librarian a better idea of the holes that exist within the collection. Moreover, it will serve as a “wish list” for future developers of the collection. Unfortunately, at the writing of this paper, the Rare Book Library did not have the available funds to dedicate to the development of this collection.

However, when those funds do become available, this list will serve as a blueprint to guide acquisitions decisions.

Both the shelf list and desiderata list offer the reader very detailed bibliographic information about the holdings of the collection. However, for a less precise listing of the contents, this paper will also include an assessment of the collection. The assessment is basically an overview of each category in the collection.

The second part of my two-fold strategy involves marketing the collection. Once this paper is completed, it is my intention to advertise its existence among members of the Sherlockian community who will be able to purchase copies of the master's paper through the University of North Carolina. I also intend to submit free copies to the two largest Sherlock Holmes collections in North America: The University of Minnesota and The Toronto Public Library. Having this paper will be particularly helpful to scholars using these institutions. If they cannot find the item they need in their own collections, they will be able to consult the holdings of the Cameron Collection without leaving their own research facility.

Thus, through the creation of this paper and its subsequent marketing, I should be able to direct some well-deserved attention to the Cameron Collection.

The Importance of Collection Assessment

“One of the advantages of being disorderly is that one is constantly making exciting discoveries.”

A.A. Milne

The assessment of a collection is a well-established practice within the library community. The benefits of conducting such an assessment include: better collection development habits, evidence of the development of the collection, and the future continuity and consistency of the collection (Houseman, 2-4; Evans, 70). Moreover, for many librarians, an assessment serves as the first step to the creation of a Collection Development Policy. In the case of this paper, it will help in the creation of a comprehensive shelf list and a desiderata list. Either way, library scholars stand behind the practice of collection assessment. Rare book scholar Roderick Cave advocates conducting these assessments, suggesting that they be done by librarians and even users with an intimate knowledge of the collection. Cave describes an “examination of the present collection by the rare books librarian and other experts in the subject field—including scholars who use the library [...] This review will be undertaken in terms of the general policy for its growth, to reveal those key books and editions—and also the secondary material—which are not yet in its stock, and are necessary to round it out” (Cave, 53).

In this instance, the assessment itself will be conducted by an amateur scholar with an intimate knowledge of the collection. However, the next logical step would be the creation of a Collection Development Policy for the Cameron Collection. A Collection Development Policy specifically addresses the needs of the collection by identifying the users and their needs; the scope; the subject areas; the formats collected; the acquisitions priorities; the limitations; gift donation; material deaccession; collection evaluation; and user complaints. The purpose of a Collection Development Policy is to prevent random and “luck-based” collection development strategies while ensuring stable and predictable development of a collection within specified areas. Moreover, it will allow for purposeful collecting that will be focused toward a specific goal (Evans, 70).

Unfortunately, due to time constraints, it was not feasible to create a Collection Development Policy for the Cameron Collection. Even so, the information contained in this current paper, particularly in the assessment section, will greatly aid in the future development of such documentation. This is important because it echoes the words of the Cameron gift agreement which emphasizes the “excellent collection principles on which it was formed [...] in the spirit of Sherlock Holmes” (Koda).

Constraints

“Sure there are times when one cries with acidity, ‘Where are the limits of human stupidity?’”

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. “To an Undiscerning Critic”

For the purpose of this project, it is important to note that the Cameron Collection is not the only collection of Sherlock Holmes materials in Wilson Library’s Rare Book Department. The University was recently the recipient of a large multi-part donation of Sherlockian titles called the Charles J. Ragland Collection which is nearly as large as the Cameron Collection. At the writing of this paper, installments were still being donated. Together, Ragland and Cameron make up the third largest Sherlockian collection in the United States (Moxey). The make-up of the Ragland collection is far more modern than Cameron. It specializes in Sherlockian periodicals and parodies/pastiches. It has relatively few of the original stories, and contains few non-Sherlockian writings by Arthur Conan Doyle (Richards, 7-8). Luckily, the strengths of Ragland complement the strengths of Cameron. Unlike Ragland, Cameron specializes in older works, particularly the original stories; it contains a limited selection of Sherlockian periodicals, and an underdeveloped section of pastiches.

Even though these collections have different scopes, duplication does exist between the two. It is of the utmost importance to avoid further duplication between these collections. To accomplish this, it will be necessary to consult Ragland’s shelf list while compiling the desiderata list for Cameron. If an item is already held in Ragland’s collection, it should probably be excluded from the Cameron desiderata list. However, these decisions will be made on a case-by-case basis. Any titles already held by Ragland will be noted on Cameron's desiderata list.

In addition to Ragland, the John Murray imprint collection has a substantial number of books by Conan Doyle. Similarly, the Detective-Mystery Collection contains approximately two hundred Sherlockian titles (Richardson, 6). These titles must be taken into consideration when creating the desiderata list. Luckily, University of North Carolina graduate student Dorothy Blunt has already compiled a list of all the Sherlockian holdings held by these collections. Using her research, unnecessary duplication will be avoided (Blunt).

The largest constraint that is placed upon this collection is the classification system. When Dr. Cameron and Miss Brooke Alan first devised the cataloging system, they did so with the intention of classifying all the works in the collection. Unfortunately, they overlooked the potential for collection development. As new items have been added to the collection, cataloguers have been forced to invent clever ways to reshape the classification system to fit their needs. The system itself is cumbersome and confusing. If active development occurs in the future, cataloguing difficulties will surely arise. For the benefit of future cataloguers, I intend to supply a suggested call number for each item on the desiderata list. It is hoped that this will minimize any potential hesitation that developers may feel about enhancing the collection.

Assessment of the Cameron Collection

“knowledge begets knowledge, as money bears interest”

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. “The Great Keinplatz Experiment”

When the Cameron Collection was donated to the University of North Carolina in 1978, it consisted of approximately 1,000 items (Liu). Since that time, the collection has more than doubled. However, the strengths that were inherent in the collection at the time of donation remain strong even now. Below, each category of the classification system is briefly summarized. This summary details the strengths and weaknesses of that section, as well as mentioning any high spot materials that may be of interest to scholars. Next to the name of each category is the approximate number of individual items which constitute that category. Listing these numbers will give a clearer idea of the size and importance of that section within the framework of the overall collection. Moreover, each item that is mentioned in this assessment is followed by their call number in parentheses.

1. Bibliographies: 41 items.

The Cameron Collection holds many early Sherlockian and Doylean bibliographies. This includes the first bibliography of Arthur Conan Doyle’s writings that was ever produced: A Bibliographical Catalogue of the Writings of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, M.D., LL.D by Harold Locke (1.12). It was published in 1928—two years before Conan Doyle’s death, so it is not a complete bibliography. Even so, it is an important historical source of bibliographical information. Other important bibliographies in the field include Jay Finley Christ's The Fiction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, (1.6) and Edgar W. Smith's works: Baker Street Inventory (1.20), and Sherlock Holmes: the writings of John H. Watson M.D. late of the Army Medical Department (1.21). In short, Cameron boasts a collection of nearly all the early works of bibliographical interest.

Because, Cameron has such an impressive array of bibliographies, it is easy to point out any obvious holes in the collection. One such hole involves William Swift Dalliba, author of three bibliographical works related to Holmes. The Cameron collection holds two of these works: The Return of Sherlock Holmes 1903-04-05 (1.7), and First Editions and Issues of the Sherlock Holmes Stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1.7). The Cameron collection, however, lacks the third piece, A List of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes Books (with Bibliographical notes) Part I. All three of these books were privately printed in the mid-'50's.

Another surprising gap in the collection is Sherlock Comes to America by Jay Finley Christ which discusses the earliest periodical appearances of the Holmes stories in the U.S. This is a particularly surprising omission because the Cameron Collection holds many of Christ's works—indeed, his copy of The Fiction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle held by the collection is personally inscribed by the author to Mary Cameron.

Another recommended acquisition is Donald A. Redmond's A Checklist of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in the Metropolitan Toronto Central Library. Cameron holds the second edition of this work published in 1977 (1.12.2), but not the first edition printed in 1973. I believe it is important to have both editions so that a scholar may compare the changes between the two works.

2A. First and Other Editions (English and American): 126 items

The Cameron collection has nearly comprehensive holdings of Sherlock Holmes first editions indeed, it holds the first English and American editions of all the Sherlock Holmes stories except for A Study in Scarlet. The Cameron collection also has an impressive array of first Continental and first Colonial editions. Because the selection is incomplete, it is highly recommended that all the missing first editions be obtained.

Another obvious gap is the lack of any Canadian first editions of the stories. Because modern Sherlockian scholarship has a strong base in Canada, it is highly recommended that the Collection's developer acquire these volumes. Because the Cameron Collection has such a strong emphasis on first editions, it is critical that this section be fully developed.

The real gem of the Cameron collection lies within this section: a complete unbound issue of Lippincott's magazine from 1889 containing the second Sherlock Holmes novel, The Sign of the Four (2A.10). In addition to this unbound version, the collection also holds a bound copy of the periodical, although the cover and advertisements were removed during the binding process (2A.10.1).

The crowning achievement of this collection would be the acquisition of a Beeton's Christmas Annual from 1887. It is in this rare magazine that the first Sherlock Holmes novel was published. Among Sherlockian collectors, a Beeton's Christmas Annual is a truly exceptional gem. If the UNC Library were able to acquire this item, it would attract scholars and researchers from around the world.

2B. Pastiches and Plays by Doyle: 5 items.

The sixty Sherlock Holmes stories written by Arthur Conan Doyle are called “the Canon” among Holmesian scholars. However, there is also a body of work known as the “apocrypha.” These are works written by Doyle about Sherlock Holmes that are not considered part of the Canon. The apocrypha generally consists of parodies and plays that Doyle wrote about his famous detective. This portion of the Cameron collection holds four of the most famous apocryphal works; however, it is missing a few items. The most notable omission is the play, The Angels of Darkness. Up until a couple years ago, this play only existed as an unpublished manuscript. However, it was published in 2002 by the Baker Street Irregulars. Even though the Cameron collection does not hold this piece, it is not recommended that they acquire it, because it is already held by the Ragland Collection, and therefore need not be acquired.

Another apocryphal work is a Sherlock Holmes poem entitled “To an Undiscerning Critic.” Although a copy of this poem is held in the Cameron collection, it is catalogued as 4A.36.1. It is recommended that this item be re-catalogued under 2B to allow for consistency within the cataloguing system.

Finally, it is recommended that the Cameron Collection acquire at least one anthology of apocryphal works. Adding such a volume would allow researchers to read all the apocryphal works from one source.

2C. Sherlock Holmes Novels Bound with Each Other: 28 items.

In comparison to other sections, the Cameron Collection holds relatively few works in this area. However, many of the books that are held contain special introductions by prominent people such as Edgar W. Smith, first editor of The Baker Street Journal, and Dr. Joseph Bell (Conan Doyle's teacher and the real-life inspiration for Sherlock Holmes). A notable and unique item in this category is a volume including the Sherlockian stories "The Red-Headed League" and "The Boscombe Valley Mystery" and the Conan Doyle novel The Doings of Raffles Haw (2C.1). An inscription in the book reads "From the library of Robert Louis Stevenson" (Wisser 63) (Blunt 47).

This section of the collection also holds a pleasant secret. The book Tales of Sherlock Holmes from the 10¢ Pocket Series published by Haldeman-Julius was overlooked during the cataloguing process. It is not listed in the card catalog nor in the shelf list of the Cameron Collection. However, it is very much a part of the collection. It is housed in an archival box with the Little Blue Book Series of Sherlock Holmes stories under the call number 2C.19.

2D. Sets of Sherlock Holmes Stories: 12 items.

Although the Cameron Collection does not possess many holdings in this area, what it does have is quite impressive. For example, it holds the first American collected edition of the Canon in two volumes: The Complete Sherlock Holmes with a preface by Christopher Morley (2D.10).

Other notable holdings include an eight volume set entitled simply Sherlock Holmes (2D.7). The set, valued at $600, includes illustrations by the foremost illustrators of Sherlock Holmes including Sidney Paget, Frederic Dorr Steele, and W.H. Hyde. Cameron also has the 3 volume edition of this important work (2D.1).

Other books in the Collection include the first edition of The Complete Sherlock Holmes Long Stories published by John Murray in 1929 (2D.3). This volume marks the first time the four novels were ever published in one volume. The Complete Sherlock Holmes Short Stories published by John Murray in 1934 is also part of the Collection (2D.5).

The most obvious omission from this section is The Complete Sherlock Holmes published in 1936 by The Literary Guild. Although it contains the same content as the above-mentioned book of the same name, this edition appears in one volume. It is the first publication of the complete Canon in a single volume.

Another valuable addition to the Collection would be The Sherlock Holmes Collected Edition, an eight volume set of books which includes introductions by eminent Sherlockians and illustrations by important artists. The set, which was published in the early 1980's, is lavishly bound in silk with gold embellishments. Although such a set would be a pricey addition to the collection, the commentary and illustrations would be important to any Sherlockian scholar.

2E. Paperbacks of Sherlockian Stories: 78 items.

The Cameron Collection holds an impressive collection of Sherlock Holmes paperbacks, most of which are part of a publisher's series. Because this section has fourteen incomplete publisher's series, it is crucial that these missing volumes be acquired.

In addition to paperbacks, this section also includes a few Sherlock Holmes comic books (2E.55). The Cameron Collection holds issues from Classic Comics, Charlton Comics and Dell Comics. Except for the Greek version of the Classic Comic, A Study in Scarlet, Cameron has the complete holdings of these works. This small batch of comics is only the tip of the iceberg, though. Hundreds of Sherlockian comic books, comic strips, and graphic novels have been published; even so, it is not recommended that Cameron further develop this area. The Ragland collection has an impressive array of Sherlockian comics—indeed, it is one of Ragland’s real strengths. To avoid any unnecessary duplication of coverage, it is recommended that Cameron limit itself to the small batch of comics that it currently holds.

2F. Foreign Language Editions: 37 items.

Sherlock Holmes books have been translated into more than sixty languages of which Cameron holds ten: Danish, Dutch, French, German, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Spanish and Swedish. It is recommended that development should only occur for the languages already held in the collection. The ultimate goal of this section would be to hold one complete version of the Canon in each of the ten represented languages.

As a side note, there are two major languages missing from this section: Russian and Chinese. If collection development does occur beyond the languages held in the collection, it is recommended that these two languages be developed first.

2G. Shorthand Editions: 10 items

The Cameron Collection has an impressive and nearly comprehensive collection of shorthand materials. They have six editions of The Sign of the Four, one complete three-volume set of The Return of Sherlock Holmes, and volume two of another set of The Return of Sherlock Holmes. The Cameron collection need only acquire four more books to hold every Sherlock Holmes story ever published in shorthand (De Waal, 106-107).

2H. Combinations of the Stories: 48 items

This area serves as a catch-all category for any of the stories that do not fit conveniently into the other sections. It includes large type editions, juvenile editions, and abridged versions. Additionally, twenty-six of the forty-eight books in this section have illustrations—some of which are completely unique to that particular edition. Many of these illustrations are actually photographs of Holmesian actors such as William Gillette and Basil Rathbone. For development purposes, it may be of interest to continue adding books to this section that feature unique illustrations and/or photographs of Sherlockian actors. For example, there are several children's books that would be appropriate additions to the collection: A Scandal in Bohemia: Seven Sherlock Holmes Stories, and Three Short Stories from the Return of Sherlock Holmes feature photographs of William Cushing and Nigel Stock (from the 1968 BBC television program). Another children's book entitled Three Adventures of Sherlock Holmes includes photographs from the 1964-1965 BBC television series starring Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock as Holmes and Watson.

3. Periodicals Containing the Sherlockian Stories: 134 items.

All fifty-six of the original Sherlock Holmes short stories originally appeared in the Strand Magazine. The Cameron collection holds individual copies of the Strand as well as bound issues, and pages cut from the magazine (3.1). Taking into consideration all these formats, Cameron holds forty of the fifty-eight stories which originally appeared in this publication. Thus, only eighteen of the original stories are missing. For completion purposes, it is extremely important to acquire these issues. If at all possible, it would be preferable to obtain the unbound versions of these works. However, bound versions would be acceptable if nothing else were available. It is strongly suggested that the developer of this collection avoid acquiring copies of the stories that were torn from the Strand.

Also in this section are issues of the Strand Magazine containing chapters from the non-Sherlockian novel Tragedy of the Korosko (3.1). Obviously, this novel has been mis-catalogued, since it is not a Sherlock Holmes story. Even so, it is important that other issues of the Strand with chapters from this novel be collected, so as to possess complete holdings.

Although the Sherlock Holmes stories originally appeared in the Strand Magazine, their first American publication was in Collier's Magazine. Amazingly, Cameron has all but two of the nineteen Sherlockian stories which appeared in Collier's (3.3). The titles they lack are "The Norwood Builder" and "The Bruce-Partington Plans." Acquiring these last two issues is particularly important, since this small collection is so close to completion.

4A. Books and Pamphlets about the Writings and Associated Topics: 131 items.

This section constitutes a large portion of the collection and includes some interesting high spot material, including the works of Sherlockian scholars such as Jay Finley Christ, John Dickson Carr, and William Baring-Gould.

In addition to literary criticism pertaining to the Great Detective, this section also holds the biographies of Arthur Conan Doyle. One of the more interesting biographies was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle written by Francisco Osorio De Calheiros in 1960 (4A.16). The entire work is in Portuguese, demonstrating Doyle's universal appeal. Because it was printed in a limited run of 200, it is quite rare.

This section also holds some interesting monographic series about Sherlock Holmes. These include: Simpson's Sherlockian Studies (4A.71.1), and O.F. Grazebook's pamphlets about Holmes and Watson (4A.39). Both were privately printed in limited editions. The Simpson's Sherlockian Studies bear inscriptions to Mary Cameron from A. Carson Simpson, the author. These works, like all autographed items, demonstrate how popular and well-known Mary Cameron was among Sherlockian researchers and scholars.

4B. Books which Contain Material about the Writings: 40 items

Many of the books in this section are collections of essays by authors such as A.A. Milne, Vincent Starrett, and Christopher Morley. Although their books are not entirely about Sherlock Holmes, they do include one or two essays related to the great detective.

Charles Honce is one of the most well-represented authors in this section. Honce, who wrote about collecting and other book-related topics alluded to Sherlock Holmes in a number of his works. Because the Cameron collection holds eight of his works, it is recommended that they acquire his other three Sherlockian writings.

Another interesting holding in this section is Ronald Knox's book Essays in Satire (4B.15). Ronald Knox was a Catholic priest who was an early influential Sherlockian scholar. Indeed, he was responsible for inventing the concept of “the Great Game.” To Sherlockians, the Great Game is the belief that Sherlock Holmes was a real person, and Dr. Watson was responsible for writing the stories. Arthur Conan Doyle is viewed merely as a “literary agent” who helped Dr. Watson publish the stories. Because of Ronald Knox’s impact on the world of Sherlockiana, it is noteworthy that Cameron owns his work.

4C. Periodicals Containing Material about the Writings: 107 items

This section contains many rare and little-known articles of Sherlockian interest. Among the more noteworthy items are three articles that were published in the Ladies Home Journal in the mid 1890’s (4C.2.2). One of the articles was an interview conducted with Arthur Conan Doyle during his 1895 literary tour in America. Another article called “The Wives of Three Authors” talks about Arthur Conan Doyle’s first wife, Louise, and their children.

One of the most interesting things about this section of the collection is noting all the different magazines that have published Holmes-related articles: The Medical Tribune, Playboy Magazine, Time-Life, Sports Illustrated, Esquire, Nature, The Parade Magazine, Reader’s Digest, The Scientific Monthly, The New York State Journal of Medicine, and The Railway Magazine. The fact that Sherlock Holmes could appeal to so many different interests is a true testament to his popularity.

One interesting holding in this section is Lippincott’s Monthly Magazine from December of 1889 (4C.71). This issue immediately preceded the issue containing Holmes' second novel The Sign of Four. The December issue contains advertisements for the upcoming Holmes novel.

This section also holds the published articles of Mary Cameron. When not busy collecting Sherlockiana, Mary Cameron was penning articles such as "Mr. and Mrs. Beeton's Christmas Annual" (4C.20), "Joseph Aloysius Hansom and his 'Patent Safety Cab'" (4C.21), and "The UNC Detective Collection" (4C.22). Her only other article, "Bibliographical Notes" was published in the Baker Street Journal (vol. 8 no. 3) and is held in section 18 of the collection.

5A. Imitations, Parodies, Pastiche, Plays, etc. in Book Form: 77 items

Arthur Conan Doyle only wrote sixty stories about Sherlock Holmes, but others have faithfully carried on the tradition. Although hundreds of authors have penned stories based on Doyle's famous characters, Cameron has a comparatively small section of Sherlockian parodies. The real strength in this section lies in the writings of August Derleth, creator of the detective Solar Pons. Although Pons was based heavily on Sherlock Holmes, he has acquired a devoted fan base of his own. The Cameron Collection only holds ten of the Solar Pons books, but it is not recommended that they acquire the missing volumes, because the Ragland Collection holds all the books in the Solar Pons series.

This section also holds numerous works of William Gillette, the actor who gave a face to the literary character of Sherlock Holmes. In addition to being an actor, Gillette was also an amateur playwright. He wrote Sherlock Holmes: a play, wherein is set forth the strange case of Miss Alice Faulkner which was based on an unpublished play script by Arthur Conan Doyle. The play was a huge success and acting companies toured throughout the United States and England performing it. Although Doyle was not directly responsible for writing the play, he was titled as a co-author in the first published edition of the work. Later editions of the play would say that it was “based” on Doyle’s work. The Cameron collection holds one of the later editions which does not list Doyle as a writer (5A.31). However, it is recommended that they acquire the 1922 Samuel French edition that lists both Gillette and Doyle as co-authors.

5B. Periodicals Containing Imitations, Parodies, Pastiche, Plays, etc: 25 items

The most impressive items in this section include the original printings of the Exploits of Sherlock Holmes (5B.3-5B.3.9, and 5B.5). These were a series of short stories written by John Dickson Carr and Arthur Conan Doyle’s son, Adrian Conan Doyle. The stories were originally published in Collier’s and Life Magazine. Eventually, they were collected and published as a book. The Cameron collection holds every magazine issue of these stories except for one. This is vol. 131 no. 23 of Collier’s Magazine. It contains the story “The Adventure of the Highgate Miracle.” Obtaining this one issue will complete the run of stories.

This section also holds two copies of the story “The Case of the Man Who Was Wanted” which was published in Cosmopolitan Magazine in 1942 (5B.4-5B.4.1). This short story is particularly infamous in the Sherlockian community. In the early 1940’s a typewritten manuscript of the story was found among Doyle’s personal papers. Because it was unsigned, it was initially thought to be an unpublished original Sherlock Holmes story. It was marketed as a great discovery and published in Cosmopolitan under the name Arthur Conan Doyle. However, it was soon discovered to be the work of a man named Arthur Whitaker. When Whitaker was young, he had written the piece and sent it to Arthur Conan Doyle suggesting that they might collaborate on a Holmes story. Doyle replied, declining the collaboration, but encouraging Whitaker to continue writing. The manuscript had remained in Doyle's personal papers, and was mistaken for a Doyle original. Once this discovery was made, the story was re-published using the correct author's name. Since then, the story has become part of the mythos of the Sherlock Holmes community. Because of this, it is particularly important that Cameron holds two copies of this story with Doyle's name on it.

6. Associated Books and Pamphlets: 33 items

Cameron holds numerous items related to the Molly Maguires, an American labor union central to the plot of the Holmes novel The Valley of Fear. These include several articles that may have inspired Doyle to write his novel: "The Overthrow of the Molly Maguires" (McClure's Magazine from 1895); "The Molly Maguires Death Plots" and "The Detective's Escape from the Molly Maguires" (both published in Louisville Courier-Journal in 1911) (6.17.1-16.17.2).

Cameron also holds several titles related to Oscar Slater, a man imprisoned for murdering a woman in cold blood. Doyle's investigations revealed that he had been falsely accused because of his past criminal record; this led to Oscar Slater's release from prison. Books held by Cameron on this topic include: The Case of Oscar Slater by Arthur Conan Doyle (6.5); Oscar Slater. The Great Suspect by Peter Hunt (6.8); The Truth

About Oscar Slater with a Statement by Arthur Conan Doyle by William Park (6.15); and Trial of Oscar Slater by William Roughead (6.25).

Oscar Slater was not the only case that Doyle was involved in, though. He also helped free George Edalji, a man accused of brutally maiming sheep. Because a Sherlockian scholar may be interested in Doyle's involvement with real-life crime, it is recommended that Cameron acquire a volume pertaining to the Edalji case. This would be: The Case of Mr. George Edalji by Arthur Conan Doyle. According to De Waal, no other books have been written about Edalji. However, there is a volume that addresses all of the real-life mysteries that Doyle investigated. This is called The Casebook of Sherlock Doyle: True Mysteries Investigated by Conan Doyle. It is recommended that Cameron acquire this volume.

Other holdings that fall under the category of "associated books and pamphlets" range from books about Joseph Bell to articles that may have inspired Sherlock Holmes stories. Of particular interest is a volume entitled Martyrdom of Man by Winwood Reade (6.21). This book, published in 1872, was one of Doyle's favorite works. Sherlock Holmes was also a fan of Reade, and in The Sign of Four, he recommends it highly to Dr. Watson. Because of the radical ideas about religion expressed in this volume, many Sherlockian scholars read the book to gain a better understanding of Holmes' personality.

7. Baker Street Irregulars and Other Sherlock Holmes Societies: 169 items

This section of the Cameron Collection holds many publications of Sherlock Holmes Societies. However, the name of this section is rather deceptive since Society publications appear throughout the collection.

This section of the collection holds an item of great local interest: the Sherlockian newsletter, Ineffable Twaddle published by the Grimpen Mires of Chapel Hill (7.4.0.1 folio). The Grimpen Mires were a Sherlockian Society that existed in the early- to mid-1980's. They had apparently published several issues of their newsletter, but the Cameron Collection only holds one issue of this publication: Series 3, Number 1 from Jan.-Feb. 1982. Research into this defunct society has failed to turn up any more issues. However, it is highly recommended that the collection's developer pays close attention the local rare book market for any issues that may come up for sale.

In addition to the Grimpen Mires, Cameron holds a number of volumes published by The Danish Baker Street Irregulars. None of these titles appear in De Waal's Universal Sherlock Holmes. These titles include: 221 B: Sherlock Holmes' Privatliv by A.D. Henriksen (7.23); Sherlock Holmes at Elsinore by Carl Muusmann (7.24); Sangen om Baker Street by A.D. Henriksen (7.25); When was Sherlock Holmes in Copenhagen? by Poul Arenfalk and Erik Hall (7.28); Sherlock Holmes Arbog I, Arbog II, and Arbog III by A.D. Henriksen (7.29-7.31); and Detektivernes fest by Henry Lauritzen (7.32). Because Cameron holds so many of this Society's titles, it would be beneficial to add the booklet Sherlock Holmes Klubben by Henry Lauritzen which recounts the history of the Society on its 25th anniversary.

Another society well-represented in this section is Old Soldiers of Baker Street from Ferndale, Michigan. Cameron holds every issue of this society's periodical The Commonplace Book (New Series), which ran from Summer of 1964 to June of 1969 (7.17). However, in 1977, this periodical was revived under another name: The Commonplace Book (Third Series). It ran from Nov. of 1977 to March/June of 1984.

Because Cameron does not hold the Third Series it is recommended that they acquire it. Ironically, there is no First Series even though the title would imply so. The Old Soldiers of Baker Street explained that the First Series was maintained by Sherlock Holmes himself and was lost to the ages.

8. Pictorial and Map Materials: 465 items

The most important item in this section is The Sherlockian Atlas by Julian Wolff (8.1). The thirteen original maps that make up this atlas have been reproduced in countless Sherlockian publications. Cameron's copy of The Sherlockian Atlas is particularly rare because it was a presentation copy inscribed to Mary Cameron and personally numbered by the author.

A helpful addition to this collection would be Terry Milne's Sherlock Holmes Map of England which combines the historical geography of Victorian England with the "pseudo-geography" invented by Conan Doyle in the stories.

Finally, it would also be beneficial to acquire The Sherlock Holmes Mystery Map by Jim Wolnick and Susan Lewis which gives the location of each of Holmes' cases.

Although there are many maps in this section, the majority of items are photographs and newspaper clippings. There is also an impressive collection of photographs of William Gillette, and illustrations by Sherlockian artist Frederic Dorr Steele. However, these photographs and illustrations are not originals—they appear to have been clipped from books and magazines. In spite of this they should prove interesting for a scholar studying Sherlockian illustrative materials.

This section also holds about four hundred individual postcards depicting London. The postcards represent famous places, monuments, neighborhoods and buildings. Moreover, the postcards are a mixture of older and newer items, and demonstrate how London has evolved over time.

Among the pictorial materials are transparencies which depict Sherlockian locations such as Reichenbach Falls, Scotland Yard, and a Sherlock Holmes plaque (8.7). Interestingly enough, one of the transparencies is of a sign for the town of Moriarty, New Mexico. Professor Moriarty, nicknamed “the Napoleon of crime” was Sherlock Holmes’ arch-rival. However, Moriarty, New Mexico has another significance. Sherlockian collector, John Bennett Shaw, lived a few miles outside of Moriarty, and actually mentioned the location in a letter he wrote to Mary Cameron. Shaw and Cameron were friends and fellow collectors and their lively correspondence is catalogued in section 10 of the collection. The transparency of Moriarty, New Mexico suggests that perhaps all the transparencies were given to Mary Cameron by John Bennett Shaw.

9. Letters and Other Autographed Items by Doyle and Other Authors: 27 items

This section is primarily composed of letters and other items written by Arthur Conan Doyle. Although the Cameron Collection also holds books that were autographed by Doyle, these are not included in this section.

One interesting item in this collection is a Christmas and New Year’s Card dated 1922 from Arthur Conan Doyle and his wife Jean to a friend in India (9.21). The greeting inside the card is a poem that Doyle would later publish in The Poems of Arthur Conan Doyle: Collected Edition under the title “Christmas in Trouble: 1921.”

This section also contains a letter dated Feb. 24, 1885 in which Doyle requests payment from a Mrs. Millar for setting a broken child's arm (9.2). This letter was written a year before Sherlock Holmes was created. Not only does it show the more medical side of Doyle, it is also interesting because of the party's name. The surname Millar would pop up in a story entitled "The Parson of Jackman's Gulch" which Doyle would publish in December of that same year (Green 26.) Fans of Sherlock Holmes will also recognize the last name Millar from the Sherlock Holmes story "The Adventure of the Noble Bachelor" which Doyle would write several years later.

Cameron also holds several letters not written by Doyle. Among them is a letter from Grant Allen (9.10). Allen was a mystery writer who arguably created the first female sleuth: Hilda Wade. Sadly, Allen passed away before he could complete his final Hilda Wade novel. On his death bed, he requested that Conan Doyle finish the final chapter of his book. Needless to say, Doyle complied (Green 348-349).

Other letters are by William Gillette (9.12); Joseph Hansom, whose father invented the Hansom cab (9.13); and E.W. Hornung who was the brother-in-law of Arthur Conan Doyle and creator of the famous literary thief, A.J. Raffles (9.14). Letters from Sherlockian scholars such as Robert Barr and Coulson Kernahan are also represented in the collection (9.11; 9.16). Of particular interest is a letter from Eugène François Vidocq, the 18th century criminal-turned-detective who would go on to become the first chief of the Sûreté². His exploits, as recounted in his autobiography Memoires, would be an inspiration for Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. The letter held by Cameron is dated 1842, fifteen years before Vidocq's death (9.19).

10. Mary Shore Cameron Correspondence: 419 items

Mary S. Cameron carried on prolific correspondences with some of the most influential Sherlockian scholars of her day. Through these associations, she was able to obtain many of the works that now populate the Cameron Collection.

For example, she kept up a lively correspondence with Sherlockian scholar Nathan L. Bengis. As a result, he sent her a special copy of his work The “Signs” of Our Times, An Irregular Bibliography with an autograph and marginal notes. This was also the case with Holmes enthusiast and scholar Jay Finley Christ. Over their years of correspondence, Christ sent Cameron a number of his works—works which are now considered seminal in the field.

Mary Cameron also received letters from William S. Baring-Gould, Luther L. Norris, Robert Schutz, Edgar W. Smith (first editor of the Baker Street Journal), and Julian Wolff. She also held an active correspondence with John Bennett Shaw, one of the most comprehensive collectors of Sherlockiana in the world. Shaw and Cameron traded letters and sent one another Holmesian items for their collections. The letters from Mary Cameron to John Bennett Shaw are held in the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota’s Elmer L. Andersen Library. At the writing of this paper, there was an effort between the two libraries to swap photocopies of the letters, so that both collections would hold the complete correspondence.

11. Scrapbooks of Mary Shore Cameron: 4 items

Over the course of her love-affair with collecting Sherlock Holmes, Mary Cameron compiled four scrapbooks which showcased every aspect of the Great Detective. The scrapbooks, which were compiled from 1944 to 1968, hold a wealth of information pertinent to Conan Doyle's brainchild. Newspaper and magazine clippings, advertisements, leaflets, greeting cards, letters, post cards, and all forms of memorabilia fill the four volumes. They serve as a fascinating and in-depth look at the evolution of Sherlock Holmes between the 1940's and 1960's. Obviously, this subject area would not be likely for development, as it would be literally impossible for a librarian to undertake the laborious process of compiling scrapbooks. Although this area will never be developed, it serves as an instructive look at the devotions of a Holmesian connoisseur.

12. Non-Sherlockian Stories and Complete Works of Doyle: 140 items

Arthur Conan Doyle wrote over six-hundred individual pieces of fiction spanning nearly every format: novel, short story, poem, play, operetta, article, pamphlet, and monograph. He also wrote in every genre, producing mysteries, historical fiction, horror/suspense, science fiction, romance, domestic fiction, religious works, literary criticism, true-crime, and history. Cameron has a surprisingly impressive selection of Non-Sherlockian works by Arthur Conan Doyle. Because of this, it is recommended, that this section should continue to be developed. Indeed, it would be advisable to acquire the first English edition of all of Doyle's major fictional works, and several of his more popular non-fiction works.

Not only does this section include books and magazines with Non-Sherlockian works, it also includes photocopies of many of Doyle's rarer short stories. At the time this collection was being compiled, many of these stories had never been published in book form. Indeed, the only way to obtain them was to track down the original periodical in which they appeared. Apparently, Mary Cameron spent much time and effort in locating these periodical issues and copying the stories. These, and other, uncollected stories would later be compiled in a book entitled The Unknown Conan Doyle: Uncollected Stories edited by Richard Lancelyn Green and John Michael Gibson. Because Cameron holds many of these uncollected tales, it would be advisable that they acquire this volume as well. It is important to note that this book was published in Britain under the name 33 by Arthur Conan Doyle: Classic Stories by the Creator of Sherlock Holmes. This British edition is held by the Ragland Collection.

13. Programs, and Other Ephemera Related to Sherlockian Meetings: 86 items

According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary, the word “ephemera” refers to something that has no lasting value. It is ironic that something of so little value could prove to be so collectible. This is certainly the case with the items in this section.

There are a lot of fun items in this section of the collection. For example, there are a whole series of printed menus from the annual dinners held by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London (13.1). There are also a number of letters, brochures, and programs from various Sherlockian events, dinners, and tours.

Of particular interest is a group of items referred to simply as “Souvenirs and Miscellany” in the card catalog (13.9). These items include Sherlockian matchbooks, stickers, bookmarks, and snippets of book covers. The nature of the items suggest that they might have been intended as future additions to one of Mary Cameron’s scrapbooks.

This section also has a quantity of photocopied Sherlockian articles. Presumably, many of these articles were sent to Mary by friends and fellow collectors. They offer a nice glimpse of the knowledge and interests of Mary Cameron at the time of her collecting.

14. Dealers' Catalogs, Addresses, Brochures and Some Correspondence: 158 items

Many of the book dealers and auction houses filed under this category have ceased to exist. However, for someone interested in the development of the original Cameron Collection, or for someone trying to trace a particular manuscript or edition of a book, these catalogs and brochures would be very helpful. Cameron holds literature from a plethora of sources including Christie's, Sotheby's, Grant Richards (who published some of Doyle's original works), and Harold S. Mortlake.

It is worth noting that Mary Cameron seemed to do the most business with Charles Rare Books, located in England and the House of El Dieff, an auction house located in Jamaica, NY. A researcher interested in the development of the Cameron Collection may discover that many of its items originated from these sources.

15. Sherlock Holmes Greeting Cards and Stationery: 31 items

The tradition of sending Holmes-related cards, particularly at Christmas, began with the Sherlock Holmes Society of London which produced the first Sherlockian Christmas card in 1953. To this day, it continues the tradition of issuing a card for every Yuletide. Other Holmesian societies that issue Christmas cards include: The Arthur Conan Doyle Society, The Franco-Midland Hardware Company, The Illustrious Clients of Minneapolis, The Northern Musgraves, and The Sherlock Holmes Society of Australia. Notable Sherlockians also issued their own cards, such as: Lord Donegall (once-editor of the Sherlock Holmes Journal), Peter E. Blau, Frank Darlington, Richard Lancelyn Green, Christopher Roden (founder of the Arthur Conan Doyle Society), and John Bennett Shaw.

The greeting card holdings of the collection can be broken into 3 main groups: Lord Donegall's series of cards entitled "Mr. Sherlock Holmes" (15.1), The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's Christmas Cards (15.2), and The Cimbrian Friends of Baker Street's Christmas Cards (15.2). Other greeting cards in this section are either non-Holmesian cards sent by Sherlockians, or cards created by Mary Cameron with Holmesian themes.

16. Sherlock Holmes in the Theatre, Motion Pictures, Radio and TV: 219 items

This category embraces books about Holmes in the media as well as movie posters, photographs and radio programs. Videotapes of Sherlock Holmes movies and television shows are not held by the Cameron Collection. Because of this, it is not recommended that these items are added. The same is true for audio tapes, computer games and video games related to Sherlock Holmes.

The media items in the Cameron Collection run the gamut from theater playbills to movie posters to books and articles. A quick scan through the holdings of this subject reveal that many of the items relate to William Gillette, the actor who defined the character of Sherlock Holmes (16.11-16.18 folio). Items range from pictures of the actor, to playbills documenting his "Farewell Appearance" as Sherlock Holmes. There is even an autographed photo written to one of his adoring fans. Although this gathering of William Gillette memorabilia is by no means exhaustive, it is quite an impressive collection for scholars interested in studying Gillette's popularity and his influence on the world of Sherlock Holmes.

Other Sherlockian actors are also represented in the Collection. For example, the Collection holds movie posters of the Universal Pictures films with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce as Holmes and Watson respectively (16.25-16.26). These films, which came out in the '30's, '40's and '50's, redefined the popular image of Sherlock Holmes. Just as the previous generation had associated William Gillette with the master detective, the next generation identified Rathbone with Sherlock Holmes.

Other Sherlockian actors represented in the collection are Clive Brook (16.27) and Peter Cushing (16.28). The Cameron collection boasts movie stills of these actors in their roles as the master detective. These glossy 8" x 10" photos were originally used for advertising purposes.

One truly unique set of items held in the collection are five 19" x 27" movie posters advertising Notti di Terrore, the Italian translation of the Sherlockian movie A Study in Terror starring John Neville as Sherlock Holmes (16.36 folio-2). The five movie posters are written in Italian and depict various colorful scenes from the movie.

Another interesting piece is a pamphlet written for the 1965 New York World's Fair which depicts scenes from a Sherlock Holmes puppet show along with information and illustrations relating to the performance (16.7).

17. Miscellaneous Manuscripts: 76 items

Cameron holds a rather small collection of items in this section; however, the items that do exist are one-of-a-kind. For example, Cameron holds three individual unpublished pastiches pertaining to Sherlock Holmes. The first two, entitled “The Adventure of the Matilda Briggs” and “The Adventure of the Atkinson Brothers” were written by H. Bedford-Jones (17.1). This same author published one Sherlockian pastiche in the 1930’s entitled “The Affair of the Aluminium Crutch.” In addition to these items, are several letters of correspondence between H. Bedford-Jones and Vincent Starrett (17.1). Letters between these two would later be collected in a book entitled Post Mortem: H. Bedford-Jones by H. Bedford-Jones. Although this book would be better classified in section 6, it should be acquired for the Cameron collection as it will give some history and meaning to the unpublished manuscripts held here.

The third unpublished pastiche is entitled “The Last Adventure of Mr. Sherlock Holmes (from the notes of John H. Watson M.D., Late Indian Army)” by Adam S. Skapski (17.5). This piece was sent to Vincent Starrett with a personal dedication from the author.

18. Journals: 300 items

The Cameron Collection holds five Sherlockian journals in this section: The Baker Street Journal (18.1), The Sherlock Holmes Journal (18.2), The Baker Street Gasogene (18.3), The Armchair Detective (18.4), and The Baker Street Cab Lantern (18.5). Unlike the other periodicals in this section, The Armchair Detective is a general mystery magazine. It is included here because many of its issues deal with Sherlock Holmes. It is interesting to note that issues of The Baker Street Journal are still currently received, making it the only current item in the whole collection.

Introduction to the Cameron Shelf List

“This is one of the things which human society has not yet understood—the value of a noble, inspiring text. [...] To think that we should walk with empty, listless minds while all this splendid material is running to waste.”

Arthur Conan Doyle. Through the Magic Door Ch. 1

The creation of a comprehensive Cameron shelf list was a daunting task which began with the existing shelf list of the collection. This shelf list was filed in a card catalog drawer and stored in the back room of the Rare Book Library. Like most manual card catalogs, it had no real consistency and ranged from very specific (listing the dates of each letter in Mary Cameron’s correspondence files) to very broad (a card simply reading “Souvenirs”). Even with these flaws, the shelf list was the only logical place to start.

The first step in the process was to transcribe each individual card into a Microsoft Word document. Wherever possible, the exact wording was maintained—however mistakes and spelling errors were corrected. Once the shelf list existed in digital form, I went back through the document identifying items that were insufficiently described. I requested these items from the stacks, and personally evaluated them. Whenever necessary, I added more detailed descriptions to the shelf list. These investigations helped identify first editions, and locate items absent from the shelf list.

Many of the items on the shelf list were also researched in Ronald De Waal’s bibliography The Universal Sherlock Holmes. This five volume bibliography is the most comprehensive work of its kind. Each title in De Waal’s work is assigned a special number known as “A De Waal number.” This number is very easily identified as it always starts with the letter “C”. An example of a De Waal number would be: C1453. I only included this number where I thought there might be some confusion about the precise edition held by Cameron. Looking up the item in De Waal also helped me learn some information about the work, such as its rarity and its importance in the field.

Unfortunately, not all the works written by Arthur Conan Doyle appear in The Universal Sherlock Holmes. Indeed, most of the non-Sherlockian works can only be found in A Bibliography of A. Conan Doyle by John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green. As with the Universal Sherlock Holmes, this bibliography has assigned a specific code to each title. This code is alphanumeric and starts with a capital letter, followed by a few numerical digits, and ends with a lower case letter. An example of a typical Gibson/Green code would be: A.23.b. I very rarely used these codes in the shelf list, however I do use them prolifically in the Desiderata list.

During the compiling of this list, I could not help but notice discrepancies in the cataloguing of certain items. Wherever necessary, I noted these discrepancies in footnotes that appear at the bottom of the page.

On a related note, the cataloguing system is very linear and it is easy to identify any holes in the system. Where there were holes, I checked to ensure that no title was catalogued under that call number. Once I was certain that no item was catalogued there, I made a note in the shelf list that says: “NO ITEM WITH THIS CALL NUMBER.” This will allow future cataloguers to know that these call numbers may be used when cataloguing new items within the collection.

The result of this multi-step process was a complete and comprehensive shelf list. It appears below.

11. Scrapbooks of Mary Shore Cameron

11 Scrapbooks of Mary Cameron. Four volumes, each 14" x 12", of mounted clippings and other materials, dated from 1944 to 1968, with collected earlier items from the 1890's through 1943: clippings from newspapers and magazines; leaflets; memorabilia; Sherlockian greetings; advertisements and dealers' descriptions; letters and postal cards. (These items overlap with nearly every category of the listed materials except works by Doyle himself) Individual items described below:

³³ Should be catalogued in section 15

11 Vol. I. Scrapbook. Green binding with gold hatching on front cover. Front board torn off. Includes newspaper clippings; pamphlets; Christmas cards; letters; book dealer's advertisements. Notable items: Arthur Wotner's signature; letters from Vincent Starrett and Edgar W. Smith

11 Vol. II. Scrapbook. Green binding with gold hatching on front cover. Front board torn off. Includes postcards of London; Victorian-era photos; Christmas cards; and comic strips. Notable items: Letter and autographed photo of Arthur Wotner; William Gillette postcards; William Gillette's autograph; complete set of Sherlock Holmes cigarette cards (19); original Edith Meiser and Frank Giacoia comic strips clipped from newspaper; rare original printing of "Watson was a Woman" by Rex Stout ("The Saturday Review of Literature" March 1, 1941. Printed especially for the author)

11 Vol. III. Scrapbook. Wine-colored binding with golden file border. Includes Christmas cards; illustrations from books, magazines, and newspapers; advertisements featuring Sherlockian themes. Notable items: Sherlockian Christmas cards; numerous William Gillette autographs.

11 Vol. IV. Scrapbook. Green mottled binding with gold floral trim. Back board torn off. Includes articles; advertisements; errata (related, either directly or indirectly to Sherlock Holmes.) Notable items: newspaper clipping of Arthur Conan Doyle's obituary; contemporary newspaper articles describing the acquittal of Oscar Slater; menu from Sherlock Holmes restaurant; real leaves from a copper beech tree growing in London; numerous pages devoted to hansom cabs, handcuffs, opium pipes, and gasogenes.

Introduction to the Desiderata List

“To live for knowledge, and knowledge alone, that was the highest aim which life could offer.”

Arthur Conan Doyle. “The Surgeon of Gaster Fell” Ch. 2

The creating of my desiderata list began with the impeccable work of the University of North Carolina graduate student Dorothy Blunt. In 1993, her Master’s paper explored the Sherlockian holdings of the several different collections in Wilson Library’s Rare Book Collection. Her research was focused completely on the various editions of the Canon, however, and did not embrace other aspects of the collections. During her research, she compiled an amazingly detailed desiderata list for the Canonical holdings of Cameron. Using this desiderata list as a starting point, I began my research into the collection’s development. My first task was to go through the shelf list to determine if the item on Blunt’s desiderata list was still missing from the collection. A surprising number of items on her list had actually been acquired since she compiled it.

Once I determined that the item was still needed by the library, I researched it in Ronald De Waal’s bibliography The Universal Sherlock Holmes. Using this as a basis, I was able to construct an in-depth bibliographic citation for each desired work which ends with a De Waal number. Every item on this list has a De Waal number, unless the item does not appear in The Universal Sherlock Holmes. If the item was not in De Waal, it is most likely that I acquired the bibliographic information from A Bibliography of A. Conan Doyle by John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green. If so, the citation will end with a code that corresponds to items in the Gibson/Green bibliography. If the citation does not have any bibliographic number at the end of it, then I retrieved the bibliographic information from the on-line Union Catalog WorldCat.

Once I had thoroughly researched all the items in Blunt's desiderata list, I began to scroll through the shelf list looking for any potential gaps within the collection. I had several criteria for locating these gaps. First of all, I looked for any series titles that appeared numerous times in the collection. Using De Waal's bibliography, I researched the series to see if the Cameron Collection held all the volumes in it. Secondly, I looked for any authors who were well-represented in the collection. Once again, using De Waal, I determined if Cameron was missing any of their major works. Finally, I looked at serials held by the collection. Using Don Hobbs' bibliography A Crowded Boxroom, I looked to see if there were any issues of the serial missing.

I also paid careful attention to the correspondence of Mary Cameron herself. I looked to see if there were any items that she mentioned in her letters which were not held by the Cameron collection. These items I included in the list, because I felt they would maintain the collecting spirit of Mary Cameron.

Once I had compiled this list, I proceeded to arrange it in shelf-list order and assign cataloguing numbers to it. Since the Cameron collection has a particularly complex cataloguing system, I realized that it would be helpful to assign cataloguing numbers for the benefit of future cataloguers.

One drawback of arranging the desiderata list was the difficulty in prioritizing the areas of development. Obviously, some items will have a higher priority than others. Naturally, many of the items should be acquired as their availability and rarity dictates.

For example, if a Beeton's Christmas Annual came up for auction, the library should make that top priority, because it is very rare for such an item to come up for sale.

However, in general, I believe the priorities for the items should be grouped by section.

Certain sections will hold a higher priority than others. For example, early editions of the Canon will be higher priority than non-Sherlockian works by Conan Doyle. Because Cameron focuses on Sherlock Holmes, non-Holmesian works are peripheral and therefore less relevant. Similarly the section "Associated Topics" will have a lower priority than "Parodies and Pastiches." Taking into account, the relative importance of the different sections, I created a priority list which appears below.

Priorities for Collection Development

- 1.) First and Other Editions (Section 2A)
- 2.) Periodicals Containing the Sherlockian Stories (Section 3)
- 3.) Paperbacks of Sherlockian Stories (Section 2E)
- 4.) Sherlock Holmes Novels Bound with Each Other or Other Stories (Section 2C)
- 5.) Sets of Sherlock Holmes Stories (Section 2D)
- 6.) Combinations of the Stories (Section 2H)
- 7.) Pastiches and Plays by Doyle (Section 2B)
- 8.) Foreign Language Editions (Section 2F)
- 9.) Shorthand Editions (Section 2G)
- 10.) Bibliographies (Section 1)
- 11.) Books and Pamphlets about the Writings and Associated Topics (Section 4A)
- 12.) Baker Street Irregulars and Other Sherlock Holmes Societies (Section 7)
- 13.) Journals (Section 18)
- 14.) Imitations, Parodies, Pastiches in Book Form (Section 5A)
- 15.) Non-Sherlockian Stories and Complete Works of Doyle (Section 12)
- 16.) Periodicals Containing Imitations, Parodies, Pastiches, Plays (Section 5B)
- 17.) Periodicals Containing Materials about the Writings (Section 4C)
- 18.) Sherlock Holmes Greeting Cards and Stationery (Section 15)
- 19.) Sherlock Holmes in Theatre, Motion Pictures, Radio and Television (Section 16)
- 20.) Pictorial and Map Materials Including Postcards (Section 8)
- 21.) Ephemera Related to Sherlockian Meetings and Events (Section 13)
- 22.) Books a Part of which Contain Material about the Writings (Section 4B)
- 23.) Associated Books and Pamphlets (Section 6)

It is important to note that several sections are not recommended for development, and therefore do not appear on the priority list. This is because there are several sections where I cannot predict future patterns of development. For example, the section containing personal letters and manuscripts from Doyle is not listed on the priority list. Personally, I think it would be beneficial to develop this section, but I cannot predict what letters or manuscripts might come onto the market and whether the library would have the resources to purchase them.

Thus, it is important to emphasize that this desiderata list is meant merely as a guide. It lists the largest gaps in the collection and offers suggestions to fill those gaps. Obviously, the collection will continue to grow through donations and purchases. Indeed, one of the truly exciting things about this collection is its potential for growth and expansion.

THE DESIDERATA LIST FOR THE MARY SHORE CAMERON SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION

All items with a * in the citation appeared in the desiderata list of Sherlock Holmes at the University of North Carolina: An Analysis of the Cameron and Smith, Elder/John Murray Collections. written by Dorothy Blunt.

All items with a † in the citation were wanted by Mary Cameron, as determined by looking in her correspondence.

Conclusion

“there lies deep in every man a rooted self-respect which makes it hard for him to turn back from that which he has once undertaken.”

Arthur Conan Doyle. “The Terror of Blue John Gap”

The importance of Sherlock Holmes library collections cannot be overemphasized. With over 430 active Sherlockian societies and more than one hundred periodicals publishing Holmesian research, it is crucial that the University of North Carolina advertise their collection among the Sherlockian community (Blau).

The intent of this paper is to clarify and even publicize the existence and holdings of the Cameron Collection. Each part of the paper serves a unique function for both Sherlockian researchers and librarians at the Rare Book Department. The collection assessment is meant as an general overview; both librarians and researchers can use it as an introduction to the collection. The comprehensive shelf list will allow researchers to identify a specific item or group of items in the collection; meanwhile, it will help librarians avoid unnecessary duplication during collection development. Finally, the desiderata list will display the gaps within the collection—allowing researchers to understand the weaknesses in the collection, while serving as a “wish list” for development purposes.

Since its conception, the goal of this paper has been to create an organized and comprehensive resource for anyone interested in Sherlock Holmes. In many regards, this goal has been accomplished, and yet there is still much work to be done. Future projects for this collection include the creation of a Collection Development Policy, the building of a fully-searchable online database detailing each item in the collection, and the creation of a website and brochures specifically for the collection. This paper is merely the first step in an exciting process intended to bring the Mary Shore Cameron collection the recognition that it truly deserves.
