Juan Corona has spent the last 14 years in prison, serving time for the grisly murders of 25 migrant farmworkers he claims he did not kill....Â The bodies were found buried in shallow graves in a prune orchard near Feather River, 5 miles north of Yuba City. The prosecution charged that Corona's motive was robbery. Because there were no witnesses and no direct evidence, the prosecution built its case on circumstantial evidence -- blood traces, two knives and a bolo machete found in Corona's vehicles and, in his files, a green ledger with 34 names, seven of them victims of the mass murder. The absence of direct evidence was blamed on sloppy detective work. Fingerprints were taken from Corona's vehicles but not from the pr I am from Yuba City, and I was eleven years old when the murders were discovered. In fact, one of Juan Corona's daughters was in my second grade class, and his wife and kids attended our church. I and my family knew many of the people who are mentioned in this book, including Father Bishop, who was our long-time parish priest.Â Corona was eventually convicted of 25 counts of first-degree murder and is currently serving 25 consecutive life sentences at Corcoran State Prison in California. What followed with Kidder's book is a masterpiece that pointed out the incompetence on both sides of the case, investigators and attorneys alike.
