VENICE. In Old Photographs 1841-1920. By Dorothea Ritter. Bulfinch; 207 pages; $35. In "Venice: In Old Photographs," photographic and cultural historian Dorothea Ritter offers a delightful collection of pictures that depict a time when some locals still remembered their city as the independent Serenissima Repubblica (Most Serene Republic). Photographs of ancient, decaying buildings and gondolas mirrored in the water of the winding canals seem typical of what one would expect in a book about Venice, but the author tells us that such images would be impossible to capture today because the vaporetti (water taxis) and large barges have taken over the once-glasslike canals.
