This book is not yet featured on Listopia. flight as early as this. It's up to you of course, but what sort of a vacation could this be?! I would advise you to concentrate on Rome on this occasion, with a possible side-trip to Florence, and leaving Venice for another trip.Â  If not, and if you still pick Venice over Florence, then I would probably train to Venice immediately upon arrival in Rome; spend two nights there and head back to Rome on the afternoon of June 1st, spending the rest of the time in Rome. If you pick Florence, you could do two nights there and the rest in Rome.Â  The train ride is short and frequent between Rome and Florence so you can make a full day of Florence and then return to Rome in time for dinner or even. However, if you don't really mind that much, I'd just follow dbabe's guidance and stick to Rome.
