Elementary school is also the first introduction to the subjects a child will be learning for years to come. The teacher’s ability to ignite an interest in subjects like math, Language Arts and science can determine the type of learner the child will be throughout school. Failing to capture a child’s interest early on can seriously hinder their academic success later, especially if the child also struggles with the socialization aspect of school. Also, teaching a child to enjoy reading is extremely important in the younger years, since reading is really the foundation for all subjects.
