Counselling in the childbearing year and Childbirth Study protocol for reducing childbirth fear: a midwife-led psycho.

Background: Counseling by experienced midwives is offered to women with childbirth fear in most obstetric clinics in Sweden, but information about the content of such counseling is lacking. Aim: To study comprehensiveness, content and organization of the midwife-led counseling for childbirth fear in all obstetric clinics in Sweden. Methods: In this cross-sectional study, data were collected using a questionnaire sent to all obstetric clinics in Sweden (n = 45); a total of 43 clinics responded. Supplementary education for midwives and the availability of treatment options varied at the different clinics and were not associated with the size of the clinic. Conclusion: The midwife-led counseling conducted at the different Swedish obstetric clinics showed considerable disparities. Doctors should be prepared to counsel women about the risks of delaying childbirth until after the age of 35, recommend leading obstetricians, responding to a study that shows that the average age at childbirth is continuing to increase. A study group convened by the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists found that the average age at childbirth is rising throughout Europe, with no sign of the trend changing. Stijn Hooren, a policy analyst at the non-profit think tank RAND and a coauthor of the study, looked at population trends in 21st century. Over the past decade, the mean age o
