Modern Drama is essentially a drama of ideas rather than action. The stage is used by dramatists to give expression to certain ideas which they want to spread in the society. The Modern Drama dealing with the problems of life has become far more intelligent than ever it was in the history of drama before the present age. With the treatment of actual life, the drama became more and more a drama of ideas, sometimes veiled in the main action, sometimes didactically act forth. There are many beautiful historical and biographical plays in modern dramatic literature. Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra are historical plays of great importance. John Drink Water's Abraham Lincoln and Mary Stuart are also historical plays. Irish Movement. 2012 Modern Drama; The spectacle of language breaking down and the explosion of the hysteria underlying the polite banalities of social intercourse To be modern is to be, in many important ways, different from anyone who ever lived before. This idea does not mean that human being has undergone a change; man's nature is always the same, but his perception of himself has distorted in a way that is significantly new. There have been revolutions in the history of art before today. There is a revolution with every new generation, and every century we get a wider or deeper change under special circu
