The Voluntary Assisted Dying Act (2017) provides a safe legal framework for people who are suffering and dying to choose the manner and timing of their death. A person seeking voluntary assisted dying must communicate three separate requests to their doctor (including one in writing). Two doctors must also agree the person meets the conditions for voluntary assisted dying. The law has many safeguards to make sure that it is the person's own decision and that no one is under any pressure to request voluntary assisted dying. In 2015, in response to the issue of how to improve people's experience at the end of their lives, a Parliamentary Committee was established to consider issues about palliative care, advance care planning and voluntary assisted dying. Tippetts, the Colorado wife, mother and writer didn't release national videos (that I know of) but she wrote a book The Hardest Peace: Expecting Grace in the Midst of Life's Hard and she kept a blog, Mundane Faithfulness, full of praise for God and illustrated with images of a woman well loved by friends and family. Her writing was imbued with a Christian vision that physician assisted dying as a betrayal of love, God and faith, not an act of loving life. In calm and elegant posts, Tippetts' evangelical Christian faith wrapped her in spiritual comfort. Jason and their friends wrote the blog entries in the last 12 days but March 10, here is what Kara said in what became her own final post. It begins with the arrival of a hospital bed so her days in hospice care might be more comfortable. Then she wrote Final Acts of Love: Families, Friends, and Assisted Dying. Stephen Jamison.
