Overall configuration, leaf shapes and textures all provide interest, but some houseplants also offer color in the form of stems and foliage that depart from the traditional shades of unrelieved green. Species and varieties that combine the color ...» The leaf veins are also red on the undersides of the leaves. Red-Stemmed Begonia. Some members of the large begonia tribe feature red and green leaves, but the evansiana species of the grandis begonia (Begonia grandis subsp. evansiana) bears green and red leaves on red stems. Hardy in USDA zones 6 through 9, the perennial tuberous begonia can be grown as a houseplant, summered outdoors or used as a garden perennial in areas where it is hardy.
