Charles Pignone, Vice President of Frank Sinatra Enterprises, told us that Sinatra often called this song his first hit and would return to it again and again, reworking it as a ballad and as an uptempo number with a Nelson Riddle arrangement for Strangers in the Night. "That was a song that he continued to sing up until he retired in 1995," Pignone recalled. "And that song came in and out of his concert repertoire through the years, and he always spoke of it very fondly." More songs from Frank Sinatra. More songs from 1939.
