Play three or four rounds, alternating writers. Students have a great time and they're shouting in English for most of the warm up! 3. Describe the Picture. I've put a little twist on the classic describe-a-picture warm up. Split the class into two teams and divide the blackboard in two. Choose three students randomly from each team to come up to the blackboard. Place a piece of chalk in each student's hand and tell them they have to write down as many things they saw in the picture as they can in 30 seconds (or one minute). Bring a chair to the front of the classroom. Split the class into two teams and have one student from the first team sit in the chair (the "hot seat") facing the class. Make sure he/she cannot see behind them. Start a timer (one minute) and write the first word on the board. These two economies have parted company, allowing the financial economy to pile up promises that the real economy cannot meet. It also presents three case studies of countries, including China, Germany and Spain. The total worldwide installed capacity of wind and solar projects is growing rapidly, and several countries are noticing increased penetrations of wind and solar in their electricity generation mix. In addition to operating experience being gained from adding wind and solar capacity, several grid integration studies have been performed that assess potential grid and operating impacts from adding higher amounts of wind and solar capacity.
