

6. Wine & War The French, the Nazis, and the Battle for France's Greatest Treasure " for history and French wine lovers by Donald Kladstrup and Petie Kladstrup. The story of some French wine producers who undertook ingenious, daring measures to save their cherished crops and bottles during the German occupation of France in WWII. Clear and well documented, this book has an amazing quantity of information about this new phenomenon of the natural wines. The book describes to all non-specialists, the various stages of manufacture of a wine vinified naturally, starting from the vine and going across the cellar to end up into the glass on the counter. Great red wines are made all over the place these days: Italy, Spain, California, Chile, Australia. In fact, one of the best of them all comes from Australia. It's called Grange Hermitage, it's made by Penfolds in South Australia and it's one of the most sought-after of all wines, red or white. Beginning with the 1952 vintage, he set aside some hermitage from the best Penfolds vineyards. Each year he made a new batch, only about five barrels, keeping his superiors in the dark about his special project. Which was not difficult: Penfolds is an enormous wine company, with vineyards and wineries in various parts of the country - a sort of antipodean Gallo. Continue reading the main story.
