NetSlaves and the Internet Economy. Who works in Internet companies? What types of jobs do they do? What types of lives do they lead? You have probably heard that employees of Internet companies are enormously wealthy. NetSlaves come in many different shapes, sizes and colors. At the bottom rung of the corporate structure are the Garbagemen, who keep the system running. At the top rung are the Robber Barons, who launch IPOs. In between are: Cops and Streetwalkers who chase bad Net elements and deliver pornography; Social Workers who manage Net communication; Cab Drivers who write Web site code; Cowboys and Card Sharks who design and manage Web site coding projects; Fry Cooks who manage multiple Web site projects; Gold Diggers and Gigolos
