The sarong is more to the Malay than is the kilt to the Scotchman. She was dressed as usual in the Malay-Javanese costume of kabaya and sarong. The sarong is the gay colored, typical garment of the Malay. I have been trying to buy a few things—a sarong, which is a putso which is a dhoti; a pipe; and a "damned Malayan kris." Sarong photographed the creature in that overcoat, and spread the picture about the world. She was dressed in the native fashion, sarong and kabaya, both of purest white. Clothing is entirely vegetable, and the Malay sarong is found throughout the east; bark-cloth Kris Kristpherson carried this further in his song, "Sunday Morning Coming Down" in which the entire long ending is made of repetitive "do do do" until it fades out at the end. Other artists have included this simple way to accent their songs, replacing just one or two words. The group The Police also sang their hit, "De Do Do Do, De Da Da Da," from "Every Breath You Take - The Singles." The sarong is a traditional garment of Java and the Malay archipelago. share with friends. Share to
