Not all people who play sports are "dumb jocks." In fact, there are studies indicating that girls and boys who played sports are more likely to land higher-status jobs than those who did not. According to a study from Cornell University, teenagers who played sports developed stronger leadership skills, worked better in teams and demonstrated more confidence. The study also stated: "Participation in competitive youth sports spills over" to occupationally advantageous traits that persist across a person's life. MMA understands the value of fitness and the life lessons sports can teach young men. To learn more about MMA and its comprehensive, college-preparatory education, visit MMA-TX.org. Blog by Maj Harold Compton & Andi Atkinson. Young people should spend more time on cultural activities such as music and theatre and less time on sport. How far do you agree with this statement? Give reasons for your answer and include any relevant examples from your own knowledge or experience. You should write at least 250 words. Besides, performing in theatres or enjoying them develops a deeper sense of the world and life. But at the same time if we ignore the necessity of physical activities, for sure we are to experience a massive health disaster in near future. For having a healthy society, we have to encourage young people to play outdoor games even more than they do these days. A young generation who actively participates in sports have fewer diseases and cut the government's healthcare budget.
