To understand the archetype that each Patriarch represents, we need to first understand his inner essence. The study of the essence of the Patriarchs is one of the cornerstones of Kabbalistic thinking. The first principle that we learn in Kabbalah is that the three Patriarchs are archetypal souls. As such, among the sefirot—the emanations through which God creates reality (at every moment) and reveals Himself in it—the Patriarchs correspond to loving-kindness, might, and beauty. Abraham represents the right dimension of reality, the dimension that is manifest in the sefirah of loving-kindness. Isaac represents the left dimension and the sefirah of might. Jacob represents the middle dimension, represented by the sefirah of beauty. Patriarchy is a social system in which men hold primary power and predominate in roles of political leadership, moral authority, social privilege and control of property. Some patriarchal societies are also patrilineal, meaning that property and title are inherited by the male lineage. Patriarchy is associated with a set of ideas, a patriarchal ideology that acts to explain and justify this dominance and attributes it to inherent natural differences between men and women. Sociologists tend to see "Jane Cicchetti's new book is one of the first to bring homeopathy in line with modern psychology and with Jungian psychology in particular. It brings much clarity to the subjects and helps us to understand their complementary nature." - Jan Scholten, M.D. The Mercurial Fountain: The Inner world of the Psyche, puts the Jungian archetypes in general and specifically the archetypes of the shadow, anima/animus and the self into an easily understandable perspective. Part three Decent into the Baths: Moving Toward the union of Opposites, places the use of dreams in case taking in a manner that opens new doors to the collective unconscious and respects constitution and temperament.
