Problems Parents Face Raising Children. Autonomous Parental Styles: Parents may style their parental behavior on letting their children make the rules. In these cases, the kids might become rebellious and difficult to handle.Â Isolation: Children get lesser chances of interacting with extended family members. This can result in poor communication skills, and a loss of traditions in the new generation, which is very important to keep the child grounded. Less Resilience: If the parents are unable to handle themselves well in emergency situations, this can adversely affect the kids, and they too can acquire various fears due to a poor support structure. Despite these problems, there are a few research-based tips to make sure that you raise happy, well-adjusted children. You can help children understand the components of their "material self" through these fun and practical lesson activities. Topics include the four lower bodies (etheric, mental, emotional, and physical) and their corresponding elements (fire, air, water, and earth), the soul's divine blueprint, the power of thoughts, the reflecting pool of the emotions, the physical body as the vehicle of action, the violet flame, and forgiveness.
