Department of Geography, East Stroudsburg University, Pennsylvania. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S0022278X00012660>. Kenya started out with almost the whole of its labour force in agriculture and related activities, but a century later more than half of the labour force is in formal or informal non-agricultural activities. The share of agriculture in gross domestic product has fallen from above three-quarters to about a quarter. This structural transformation has driven the changes in incomes, income distribution, and poverty. This chapter seeks to measure and explain changes in incomes, inequality, and poverty in Kenya.Â Class and Economic Change in Kenya: The Making of an African Petite-Bourgeoisie.
