LITERATURE OF THE EARLY 20th CENTURY. The Boer War lasted from October 1899 to May 1902. The English suffered many difficulties and losses at the beginning of the war, but they came out of it victors. However, this victory did not improve the negative attitude of progressive people in England towards bourgeois ideology and culture, towards its social life and economic development. During the 1890s critical realism continued to develop in the works of many writers. One of them was George Meredith (1828–1909).
The Gadfly (1897), her masterpiece, is the story of a young man, Arthur Burton, one of the leaders in the struggle of the Italian people against Austrian religious and social oppression during the 1840s.
