Quebec Campaign. Date: June 1775 - May 1776. Continental Commander : Philip Schuyler. As the defeat of Continental forces in Quebec became a reality, the attention of Congressional leaders was drawn fully into the search for an explanation for that defeat. Some, like John Adams and Richard Henry Lee, adopted a deus ex machina approach, specifically blaming the outbreak of smallpox that ravaged Continental troops outside the walls of Quebec City for the failure of American arms.³ Most others, however, laid the blame for the Continental defeat in Quebec elsewhere.
