Lifelines: Black Families In Chicago

Joyce Aschenbrenner

designed to bring to students in the social sciences insights into the richness and complexity of human life as.
Meanwhile, the middle-class black families that once sustained neighborhoods in Chicago continue to leave for even better opportunities—Chicago lost 181,000 black residents between 2000 and 2010, most of them middle-class people who could afford to pick up and move elsewhere—which further widens the gulf between the rich and poor. In Chicago, unlike many global cities, the neighborhoods that struggled 30 years ago are still the neighborhoods that struggle today. While New York’s East Village has changed completely in the past three decades, Chicago’s Englewood has been slower to change. Find and connect with Chicago’s best Family Photographers.
