I highly recommend that NO ONE even consider entering a committed relationship ever do so, without having a working knowledge of Janov's writings, unless they are hoping for a lot of suffering and a loss of much time and money! I KNOW this from my own personal experience and the experience of many others, including one currently looking at 5-10 years in the "pen"! He has written several more great books since this one, so also read one of his best; Life Before Birth. IMO, no one should be issued a drivers license, nor H.S. diploma without and understanding of Janov's writin the power of the subconscious mind over our perceptions and reality is immense. The incredibly strange part of the critical faculty is that it appears to be fully established by the time weâ€™re about four years old. What?!?Â First, itâ€™s essential to understand what suffering actually is. Is freedom from suffering the end of pain, anger, and unpleasant emotion, replaced by everlasting bliss? Sorry, but no. That wouldnâ€™t be very realistic or very human. Suffering is not pain, but the avoidance of it. Let me say that again: The definition of suffering is the avoidance of pain. Pain demands attention, and when it is avoided, it repeats itself over and over again. Suffering is the experience of the same repeating pain. Herein resides the grand paradox.
